Agreement expands IBM Rational software training to additional Boeing sites and remote locations nationwide

(Durham, North Carolina, USA: August 27, 2007) Island Training Solutions, Inc.

(www.islandtraining.com), an IBM® business partner that provides training and mentoring for IBM Rational® software tools, announces that it has expanded its relationship with The Boeing Company [NYSE:BA]. Under a new agreement, Island Training will provide software training services to Boeing's Learning, Training and Development organization through 2010.

Extending an agreement between the two companies first signed in 2004, the new contract enables Island Training's continued support of Boeing sites in the Puget Sound, Washington region. Island Training will now implement training programs at a larger number of Boeing sites nationwide, as well as in remote locations.

"Our training services leverage educational opportunities across Boeing's enterprise to all eligible employees in a cost-effective way," said Daphne Brashear, co-founder of Island Training. "The contract reflects our ongoing commitment to provide accessible and professional training for complex and highly technical software systems."

Island Training's customizable curriculum allows clients like Boeing to tailor coursework to a site's specific needs. Clients can select relevant courses from the company's extensive library of IBM Rational software learning modules and choose between traditional, on-site classroom settings in one of Island Training's mobile labs, or remote instruction taught via the Internet in virtual classrooms.
